"Torat Azamra" - Liquety Moharan

By Rabbi Nahman of Breslav – Translated by Rabbi Arthur Green

You have to judge every person generously.

Even if you have reason to think that a person is completely wicked,

It's your job to look hard and seek out some bit of goodness,

Some place in that person where he is not evil.

When you find that bit of goodness

And judge the person that way,

You may really raise her up to goodness.

Treating people this way allows them to be restored,

To come to teshuva.
