SESSION TIMELINE & OUTLINE:

Introduction: (3 minutes) Leader says they are going to write a “HUGE check” to charity.

Then, leader makes out a physically HUGE/BIG CHECK to local charity for tzedakah. (Everyone expects this to be a large dollar amount, but it is actually just a large piece of paper) This leads to a conversation about how the size of a donation doesn’t matter; it’s the kavannah behind the gift that matters.

Have participants define Kavannah.

5 minutes

Definitions:

Leader asks everyone to write down each bolded word (below) in their own notebook then to write a definition of that word. Give this some thought, as you will be sharing these with the group.

What is Tzedakah?

What is the root? "Tzedek"

Everyone write a definition of "Tzedakah"

Write definition of "giving"

Write definition of Tzedek (Justice)

Everyone write definition of giving

Write definition of charity

What is the difference between giving and charity?

5 minutes

Have participants get in partners and share your definitions, then bring the group back together for a larger share.

3 minutes:

Introduce the following thoughts and questions to the participants:

All these words have some internal meaning to us. This exercise has shown how differently our answers can be for the same words even though we all come from fairly similar backgrounds. What about our campers? What about non-Jews? What about non-Americans? What about non-westerners?

How can our words influence our actions? What is the Kavannah of giving, charity, Tzedek, and Tzedakah?

Conclusion: How can you redefine "giving"? How can you apply "giving" to camp?
