

Wailing Walls:
ISRAELI STREET
ART
POST OCT 7

Benzy Brofman

Benzy Brofman:

“In one moment, I feel like my life has turned upside down. The life of the whole country was turned upside down. I find myself thinking about the nature of human beings, about our goals in life, about wars that have been and will be,” he adds. “I think about the amazing things I’ve been through during the past year, about all the love I’ve given and received back in Israel and abroad, about the good people I meet, and I just don’t understand how suddenly all this goodness is dwarfed by this horrifying cruelty.”

HAPPY BIRTHDAY
KEFIR...

HAPPY

BENZI BROFMAN

BIRTHDAY

BRING ME
HOME NOW

הסתכלו זהו האתר...

BENZI BROFMAN

the Missk:

“It’s a small country, and we have bigger problems than vandalizing walls, to be honest. It’s also a legit means of memorial paintings, the country is filled with them, unfortunately, beautiful paintings, but unfortunate subjects. When the war started, there was a high, high demand of army bases asking for graffiti people to come and paint their walls, and a lot of willing artists went and painted the walls... In these last 20 years, it became such a big part of normal things. It seems, at some point, you cannot own a business, if you don’t have a graffiti wall ”

the Misk

Guernica Picasso

Inbar “Pink” Haiman

Noam Tibon, Yair Golan, Israel Ziv

Grafitiyul

Amit Mann, a paramedic from Kibbutz Be'eri; Aner Shapira, who threw out seven grenades hurled into a shelter by terrorists, saving many lives; Ben Shimoni, who survived the music festival massacre and returned several times to save people before he was murdered; and Awad Darawshe, an Israeli-Arab ambulance driver who saved wounded during the attack before he was killed.

7.10
ה'יום בו לקחו את
האוד

Ben
Ben
משתלת בן בן
→

אקטור
סנרו